Irresponsible

THE spectacle of Nero fiddling while Rome burned is recalled by the action of German politicians in the reichstag, on Friday. There has rarely been a more discouraging example of the extent to which partisan feeling will neglect and ignore the patent necessities of a situation. Germany's only hope, at present, is a strong government with the full support and loyalty of the country, able to take the drastic measures demanded by the crisis and to present a firm and responsible front to the allies. The ideal situation would be, perhaps, a coalition of parties and sinking of party rivalry and animosity such as all countries found it possible to form in the early days of the world war.

Even the German socialists found it possible to support the imperial government and the monarchists with enthusiasm and a good conscience, in an enterprise of conquest which violated every principle, implied and expressed, of their socialistic creed. So the sight of these socialists deliberately throwing away what may be the last chance for stable government of the republic which they so ardently sought for many years, is one to distress the believer in democracy. It would not be so idiotic, perhaps, if the socialists wished to overthrow Stresemann for the purpose of taking control themselves, in the expectation of making a better job of government. But they are frank to confess that they do not want the responsibility. They have no illusions about the difficulties of the government, no substitute to offer.

It is no wonder that President Ebert is reported ready to dissolve the reichstag and go on with a government not responsible to the people or to their leaders, making laws and enforcing them without reichstag authority. Why should he not, when the reichstag is shown to have so little interest in the national welfare that it will smash the government in the midst of a crisis on a point of technical politics? Better an honest dictatorship than that sort of democracy.

Superman

CHARLES P. STEINMETZ, the greatest electrical genius of the age, died at the close of a long life of the utmost fruitfulness, not so long ago. He left an estate consisting of a $500 insurance policy and a ten-year-old car. It is reported that during the later years of his life, when his genius had been proved and recognized, and he stood the acknowledged leader of his branch of science, he drew no salary whatever, but had an arrangement with his employers whereby he called upon the cashier for whatever sums he needed, whether for his research work or personal expenses.

He was, incidentally, a socialist. One can see how a man whose life could be thus arranged could be a sincere socialist. Ownership, possessions, meant nothing whatever to him, as his "estate" amply shows. He had no family. His whole interest was in his research and in the development of his inventions, in which he had an intensely practical mind. His political philosophy was such as would naturally, almost inevitably in a man of his remorselessly logical type, follow from his work and training. He found his pleasure in his work and in a simple summer camp. Having no use for frills, naturally he would, being Steinmetz, be unable to see any value in the wherewithal with which frills are purchased.

The socialist press makes much of Steinmetz because of his politics, presenting him with the greatest justice as an ornament of the party. However, the capitalist press is no less eager in acclaiming his greatness. The fact of the matter is that in all but the physical Steinmetz was one of the few men the world has seen who may with honesty be called a superman. He is no argument for socialism, any more than he is an argument for the great machine industry which he served and fostered in his years of scientific activity. He was unique. The things that count enormously with the average man, and count only less with the above-average individual, meant just nothing at all to him. He could dispense with luxuries he had earned many times over and which present society concedes to men of his great ability and usefulness, because they were not luxuries but nuisances to him. But the socialists who acclaim him as the pattern of their ideal are not so organized. They are average men. Most of them denounce luxury and wealth not because they honestly despise it, as did Steinmetz, but because they envy it in the possession of others. They oppose existing social institutions not because, as in Steinmetz's case, they seem to them idle and unjust, but because they are in the hands and minister to the power of others.

Russia, as always, remains the example of what socialist theory does when it is put into practice. For every genuine socialist of the Steinmetz type in Russia there were a thousand who were socialists from discontent and jealousy. When Marxism replaced capitalism as the political gospel of their country they were not interested in producing for the good of all, as was Steinmetz, or for the joy that they found in creating good work. They were in it for power and pelf, and they got them—though they beggared their country and its helpless, ignorant people to get them.

Steinmetz is not an argument for socialism, as the socialist press would have us believe. He is an argument for training and education that gives intelligent men power over their environment, and blesses them with judgment which perceives the emptiness of great possessions, useless luxury and silly class distinctions. When all men are Steinmetzes, then socialism, perhaps. But not yet—never, so long as the qualities the lack of which made Steinmetz unique in his generation remain the almost universal characteristic of men and women.

These people have just had fine new residences for themselves completed: C. M. Strund, Fifteenth and Madison; Lewis Bennett, Sixteenth and Madison; H. H. Harrison, Thirtieth and King, and John Turney, Twelfth street.

Norris Bacheller, newly appointed postmaster, has selected Louis Hambacher as assistant. Mr. Hambacher has been employed a number of years in the freight depot of the Milwaukee road. He is twenty-eight years of age.

Thirty unemployed men applied yesterday at the La Crosse office of a lumber firm for work in the woods. Most of them have families and say that no work can be found. Help was scarce here last year but it will be too plentiful this year.

Cupid and the Hon. George Clifton

BY H. IRVING KING

The Hon. George Clifton had resolved to marry. As he sat in his office thinking the matter over he wondered that he had not done so before. His friends had been giving expression to the same wonder for years—for the Hon. George was a rich lawyer of excellent character, forty-seven years old and recently elected to congress. His had been a busy life; he had traveled a swift and crowded road and had neither time nor inclination to pause by the wayside.

True there had been years and years ago, when he was barely twenty-five, a girl—! But she had married somebody else. Girls will do that sometimes. But he had been getting along toward fifty his mind had suddenly taken a slant toward matrimony. The immediate and determining cause of this slant was Grace Frey, daughter of John Frey, stock broker, and Margaret, his wife, a social climber.

The Freys were delighted, and as for Grace she did not appear averse to the arrangement. She had had it so repeatedly impressed upon her by her fond mamma that she ought to make a brilliant marriage that she had come to think so herself. The fact of the existence of Arthur.

Merced was, however, a trifle disturbing; this fact did not fit in with the other facts of life as she had been taught them. "It is too bad, Arthur," she told the young man, "that was were not born in the same rank of life. As it is, papa would never consent to a marriage between us is out of the question."

"Nonsense!" cried Arthur. "What do you mean by 'the same rank in life?' Wasn't my great-grandfather aide-de-camp to Washington?"

"Oh, yes, I know," replied Grace, "and papa began as an office boy in New York. What I mean is that papa has lots of money and you are a young lawyer without any."

"And are you really going to marry old Clifton?" asked Arthur. "Why, he is old enough almost to be your grandfather."

"Yes," replied Grace demurely. "But mamma says that disparity in age does not count where the other conditions are so advantageous."

Arthur said something under his breath. "Oh," cried the girl, "There you are swearing again!"

"I didn't," protested Arthur. "I only said 'Butter!'"

"I don't care what you said," returned Grace. "I think you are just as horrid as you can be. You won't help me at all."

Arthur, of course, comforted her, and they finally settled down to a long and serious talk, during which certain plans were formulated for a set-to between Cupid and Mamma. In these lights the matter in hand over in his mind, which lighter is going to take the count.

It was the day after Arthur and Grace had arranged for the great Cupid-Mamma prize fight, in which Grace was to be the prize, that the matter in hand over in his mind, which lighter is going to take the count.

OUT OUR WAY

were suit cases and traveling bags.

"Where were you going away?" asked the Hon. George Clifton, and said slowly and firmly: "Mr. Clifton, we were eloping."

A dark shadow came over the face of George Clifton. Merced handled his monkey, he usually went on an elopement, but it was a short but earnest talk with Merced, and he thought—Arthur said—

"Clifton was the first to recover himself. 'At 1 o'clock in the afternoon,' he said, with a laugh, 'I had an unusual hour for an elopement, but it was a short but earnest talk with Merced, and he thought—Arthur said—'

"You see, the family were all away," said Grace, "and we thought—Arthur said—"

"I—then," said Clifton. "Mr. Arthur Merced, is it not? I have seen you in court. Congratulations, you are a man in which you handled the Hart-Felt vs. Loomis case. Can I speak with you privately for a minute?" After a short but earnest talk with Merced, and he thought—Arthur said—

Clifton lifted his hat to Grace and walked back to the station to take the next train for the city. That night he wrote a letter to Mr. John Frey, in which he stated that "considering the disparity in ages between Grace and himself, and having discovered that she had a previous attachment, he" etc.

and highly recommended to Frey one Arthur Merced, a young man whom he was about to take into partnership.

Then he sat down before the fire to gaze into "that deep, deep Gulf where things that might have been and never were are always wandering." Mrs. Frey stormed and wept and demanded that her husband either sue Clifton or throw him out sight.

"Clifton," replied the stock broker, "let the girl marry Merced. Rising young man—old family, too. Just what you need, Mary. In your social climbing. As to throwing Clifton, not much. He's going to subscribe fifty thousand to that new issue of Y. X. & T. bonds I'm floating."

INDIAN ADDRESSES SCHOOL CHILDREN AND LEADS A HIKE

The parading schools of the city received on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week, some valuable instruction in Indiancraft, from Dan Young Bear, the full blooded Musquakie Indian after whom the Boy Scout camp is named.

Dan talked before all the children of the German Lutheran, St. James, St. John's, St. Joseph's, St. Mary's, Holy Trinity, and the Holy Cross schools, besides telling stories to the small tots at the orphanage, and more detailed instruction for the older students of that institution.

Dan, on Friday morning, danced and instructed the Freshman and Sophomore Phys. Ed. students of the Normal school, and on Monday morning the Sophomore class will have their picture taken while going through the formation of the snake dance. It is surprising to see how apt many of the young men and ladies are in adapting the foot movements of the different Indian dances.

On Saturday morning at 9:30, Dan conducted the all community hike for boys from nine years of age up, to the top of Cliffwood. Each boy took with him a small piece of meat, and two shovels of bread, which he cooked and ate on top of Cliffwood. Dan gave his regular dances around a camp fire on the bluff.

Saturday evening, Young Bear will dance, sing, and tell stories at the Y. W. C. A. starting at 7:30. On Sunday morning, at the Sunday school of the Presbyterian church, Dan will talk in English telling the students of the work of the Presbyterian missionaries among his people.

GREAT INTEREST IN GAME BETWEEN MAROON, BADGER

Result Will Determine Championship of Five-Year Series

CHICAGO, Ill.—Wisconsin and Chicago battle Saturday to determine the championship of their own five-year series of games in a contest that rivals the western conference championship games in interest.

Outcome of the clash of these two strong teams both eliminated from the Big Ten race by mid-season, is taken for a toss-up. Victory for Wisconsin will give the Badgers a lead in the five-year series, which terminates this season, while a win for Chicago would tie the Maroons for honors in the five season schedule.

Ryan vs. Stagg Strategy
Coach Jack Ryan of Wisconsin, will pit his strategy against that of Coach Stagg, the Maroons' veteran mentor, for the first time. With two strong lines and two powerful backfields competing, strategy appears to hold the solution of the game outcome. The team with the best generalship would seem to have the edge.

Coach Stagg is prepared to speed up his attack with well groomed substitutes injected at critical times during the contest. He is expected to keep Zorn, quarterback Curley, Grenbaum and Rolleston, in reserve ready to freshen up the attack.

Coach Ryan has his eleven in perfect trim, determined to add one conference victory of consequence to his record.

It looks like a game that will mean a hard trial for ends of both squads. Both lines are of stone wall quality, while each of the teams have strong end running attack. In this quarter, however, Chicago is regarded as superior to Wisconsin.

The two teams clash before a crowd of 34,000, crowded into all available space at Stagg field to witness the classic fight.

CONFIDENT, YALE ELEVEN OUT TO AVENGE FOUR CONSECUTIVE DEFEATS AT HANDS OF HARVARD

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—By The Associated Press.—An undefeated Yale eleven confident of its ability to avenge four consecutive defeats at the hands of John Harvard, prepared Saturday to take the field at the Harvard stadium, a battle ground on which no blue team has been able to push across a touchdown since 1907. Although the historic Yale-Harvard rivalry, which saw its first game in 1875, shows 23 victories for Yale against 13 for Harvard and five ties, the Crimson has won eight of the last nine starts, and Saturday seeks to establish a new record of five straight wins over Eli.

The team wearing Harvard's colors for the forty-second game between the two universities will face the final and decisive battle of their 1923 season with a record of performance far from impressive. A tie score with little Middlebury and defeats by Dartmouth and Brown were blots on the Crimson's escutcheon that nothing but defeat of the traditional enemy today could offset. While Yale ruled a strong favorite, Harvard players and supporters expressed the confident belief that the team had "found it," however, belatedly, and that "Yale could be beaten."

Yale's record of offensive for the season is 217 points scored by the Blue against 35 scored by opponents. Against this Harvard has run up 73 points against 42 scored by opponents. The Blue has pushed over 20 touchdowns, the Crimson ten.

Both squads were reported at the top of their form for their final battle.

On the line the teams appear fairly evenly matched, with the Blue heavier in reserves but Yale's wealth of backfield material cannot be duplicated by Harvard.

A playing field rendered soft and slippery by heavy rain throughout the night promised to hamper both teams but Yale, richer in replacement strength may feel the handicap less than the defending forces. More than 55,000 spectators are expected to view the game.

GILL RETURNS TO LA CROSSE AFTER BEATING DARCY

Stanley Darcy Given Unmerciful Licking in Ten Rounds Thursday Night

Jimmy Gill, the La Crosse speed boy, has just returned from Urbana, Ill., where he gave Stanley Darcy an unmerciful licking in ten rounds on Thursday night.

All papers having a representative at the roadside gave Jimmy the decision, excepting a Champagne publication, Darcy's home town, which called the fight a draw. The accounts of other papers devoted columns to the praise of Gill and his decisive victory.

Gill was in wonderful condition and hit Darcy at will throughout the fight. Jimmy was credited with every round except the seventh, when the local boy s'acked up a bit to make possible a more dashing finish. Gill opened Darcy's right eye in the second round.

Buddy MacDonald of St. Paul challenged the winner.

This was the third time the boys have met, being greeted with a packed house on each occasion. Brick Gordon, Lincoln Shick and Timothy Dalton, La Crosse men attending the Illinois university, were at the fight.

Gill will leave La Crosse in a few days for St. Paul, where he intends to get booked with some of the leading fighters.

GREAT MASS OF SHARPSHOOTERS WILL BE BROUGHT TOGETHER IN STATE PIN MEET AT JANESVILLE

BY WM. F. FENSKE
(Secretary W. B. A.)

THE coming state tournament at Janesville will bring together the greatest outlay of sharpshooters that have ever been gathered together in the Badger state, and the question arises, what will be seen in the way of huge totals.

For the past twenty odd years the Wisconsin state association has drifted around between a dozen cities in the state, and each year we have found the bowlers tapping the maple for greater totals, and which brings out the question, are the bowlers getting better as the years roll along, or are they becoming more scientific or are the alleys and wood becoming easier year by year.

Famous Old Team
When the Wisconsin state tournament started with something like forty teams in 1902 the Ragaboes, a famous old pin quint of Milwaukee bowlers were herded far and wide as the best ever, although they topped only 2649 for their total in the five-men event. The first two-men champions were a good pair of shooters from La Crosse, Olt and Miller, who won that event with 1223, and Eddie Dunsod of Milwaukee captured the singles with 591.

These scores would hardly bring money to the bowlers in the state tournaments of today. That is big money, and would hardly be noticed. You must remember, however, that the bowlers of long ago were handicapped with the old wooden egg and were obliged to bowl on alleys that were not planned each year, and there were no automatic pin spotters to see that the regulation set up of pins was given the performer every time he sauntered up to the foul line to smack the wood. It was, to a great extent, a go-as-you-please affair as far as everything was concerned, depending upon the luck that you were getting a good pin boy to set up for you, and that your old wooden pin did change shape over night from heat or cold.

Today with the alleys being kept in the greatest of shape and the pin spotters working faultlessly, together with the perfect rubber ball, the bowlers are getting 100 per cent of what they shoot at and deserve to get it.

The old Ragaboes came back in 1903 with a good score of 2820 and were the only Wisconsin team to ever repeat in the state event.

Scores in the five men have only climbed over the 3000 mark twice in two years, and that was when the Night-Hawks at Beaver Dam in 1913 rolled 3018 and Schroeder-Daly murdered the wood at Kenosha in 1916 for 3058. However, scores since then have been high in this event, with the Parkway Alley Five of Milwaukee winning at Green Bay with 2995, only five pins away from the coveted 3000 mark.

Doubles Jinxed
The doubles in Wisconsin state tournament seemed to be jinxed as they never reached the 1300 mark, the highest being bowled by Elmer Becker combination in 1922 at Janesville with 1298, which is pretty close.

Jack Kuntz and Jake Herman of Kenosha won at Racine in 1912 with 1226, and strange to say this same pair came back at Watertown in 1917 with 1253, winning again, being the only repeaters in this event in the two men Wisconsin championships.

The singles have brought some scandalous scores since the event of Ed Dunsod and his 591 in 1902, and the first real big score was bowled by Bill Badtke at the 1908 Milwaukee tournament when he gathered 717. The bowlers rode at the van for a dozen years, and then Willis Swift of Milwaukee tipped the dope bucket with 737 at Manitowish. Another Milwaukee boy, Herb Ewald, was going right at Madison in 1922 and now leads the Wisconsin shooters with 738.

Shatter Records?
What will be done this year at Janesville is the question, and many are willing to answer in advance that 3000 will be the five-men score, and the first 1300 will be made in the doubles, and that the singles will again see a 700 total. The prognosticators are working on the basis that the Janesville alleys are the fastest ever used for a state tournament, and judging from action the bowlers are now getting, the scores will be high, and who can tell but that the big dream score of bowlerdom will be established at the Janesville tournament.

Secretary William Wenske of Milwaukee has a wonderful advance opinion, and all conservative bowlers predict that the tournament will draw an entry of well over one thousand teams, placing it far in the lead of any state tournament ever held in the world.

ILLINOIS RISKS
CONFERENCE TITLE AGAINST BUCKEYE

COLUMBUS, Ohio.—Illinois, undefeated in the western conference football race, risks its chances for a championship here Saturday when the Illinois clash with Ohio State, at Ohio stadium, which team has been coached the last minute to watch a particular threat possessed by its opponents.

Coach Wiley's final words which his Buckeye team will carry into the fray will be "Watch Grange"—Illinois star halfback and leading scorer of the Big Ten. Watch Ohio's forward passes, was the admonition of Bob Zupke, Illinois mentor, at his team's final workout here Friday afternoon.

Illinois will enter the game with its regular lineup intact, while Ohio is somewhat the worst for injuries.

RELATION OF CITY TO RURAL LIFE IS SUBJECT OF TALK

Lecture Series Opened at St. Joseph's School Hall by Dr. O'Hara

"Other problems have been more able to give voice, with the result that they get their problems before the public much easier," said Dr. Edward V. O'Hara in accounting for the apparent lack of interest in farm problems. Dr. O'Hara, who is chairman of the Rural Life Bureau of the N. C. W. C., spoke on "Co-operation of Country and City for Social Welfare" at St. Joseph's school hall Friday night as the first number of the program of lectures on social welfare to be given during the winter.

In discussing the question further, Dr. O'Hara said that the rural population is the seed plot of the population and the natural habitat of the family. It is the seed plot of population because it is here where a large per cent of the nation's children are reared. According to the 1929 census, there are 30,000,000 people in the open country or farms, and a like number in the small towns with populations varying from 2,500 to 100,000. However there are 2,000,000 more children under 10 years of age in the country than in the small cities.

The farm, according to Dr. O'Hara, rears, feeds, clothes and educates the children and later turns them over to the cities. The farm is usually thought of in terms of food supply. This is the last. The great debt of the city is not for food, but for the great army of men and women who are recruited by the city each year and who help run the city's business.

Family Thrives on Farm
The farm is also the natural habitat of the family because it is here that the unity of the family is secured. Here husband and wife have the same community of interests. This consequently leads to fewer divorces. In cities it is estimated that between 10 and 12 million women are wage earners. They have a high standard of living and do not care to marry young, as a result the birth rate is much lower in the cities.

On the farm, a child is considered an economic asset, while in the city, each child is an economic liability. Apprenticeship is also taught to a larger degree on the farm than in the city. "Apprenticeship," according to Dr. O'Hara, "is the price that must be paid for thoroughness."

Remedies Suggested
To remedy this condition, Dr. O'Hara suggested that immigrants be distributed and the farmers be anchored to the land. He explained that no objection could be raised in regard to farmers moving to the cities. The main objection comes when the farmers work as common laborers.

The opportunity of self is also greater on the farm. Private ownership helps the farmer and as a result 6,000,000 men are their own bosses.

In closing, Dr. O'Hara spoke on the co-operative movement and referred to it as the Christian organization of industry. Rural homes and health were also discussed.

SHOTS, TEAR GAS SUBDUE CRAZY MAN IN CHICAGO HOTEL

Police Have Hot Work in Taking Southwest Gunman to Hospital

CHICAGO, Ill.—Guests of the Hotel Sherman scurried for cover last night while thirty policemen and detectives with tear bombs and revolvers assaulted a room on the fourth floor in which Roy Hendrickson of Shawnee, Okla., had barricaded himself.

Hendrickson, who says he was a member of former Governor Jack Walton's Oklahoma secret service, became suddenly deranged and fired several shots at the officers, before the tear bombs, thrown through the transoms, forced him to a window. The officers broke open the door and took him to a hospital.

Kidnap Reporter
Several hours before the shooting Hendrickson telephoned a Chicago newspaper asking that a reporter be sent to a story about his being kidnapped by a police captain. When the reporter came to his room Hendrickson locked the door and told him he was to stay there all night because "something was going to happen."

The reporter, by a ruse, eluded Hendrickson and called the police. The demand of officers for admittance was answered by bullets through the door. A concerted attack was made when reserve officers arrived.

Have Bullet Shield
A bullet-proof shield of steel behind which two officers were sheltered as they moved it before them was used by detectives in the assault. After the door was burst open the officers followed the shield into the room and overpowered Hendrickson, who was prevented from escaping through the window by officers in the court below, with whom he exchanged shots.

Hotel guests thought the place had been raided by police. With tears inspired by the bombs streaming from their eyes they made frantic efforts to hide valuables, until hotel officers and the other officers restored calm.

EIGHT BUCKSHOT HOLES IN SKULL WON'T KILL NEGRO SHOT BY POSSE

NEW ORLEANS, La.—The eight buckshot which drilled holes through the skull of Pleasant Miles, La Fourche parish negro desperado, will not kill him, surgeons at Charity hospital announced Saturday.

Miles killed a negro near Thibodaux last week and in a fight with a posse seriously wounded three white men and himself was shot and left for dead. An X-ray photograph of Miles' skull shows that four buckshot penetrated the skull on the left side, near the back, three over the left eye and one just above the bridge of the nose.

The posse left Miles for dead at the scene of the encounter, took the wounded to Thibodaux and sent a truck for his body. When the truck arrived Miles was found sitting up and calling out that he surrendered.

The dancers wound an intricate path, in twos and then in fours following the leader in graceful lines and difficult figures, winding in and out and finally swirling into the graceful and enticing waltz. The spectacle presented stately dames in rich costumes, young matrons handsomely gowned, and pretty lasses in dainty frocks. The floor managers were Messrs. H. M. Curtis, Gysbert Van Steenwyk and Clarke Easton.

One distinctive and fascinating feature to the ball was the gowns, which were noticeably gay, the prevailing colors of the season being predominating almost to the exclusion of white, which formerly has been greatly worn. Many beautiful ones were seen, their brilliant coloring under the brilliant light reflecting a shimmering kaleidoscopic picture.

Decorations Wonderful
The main hall gave an impression of a Japanese garden of trailing vines, lanterns and balloons. The huge chandelier was completely covered with southern smilax, which twined about the branches and fell in graceful lines and festoons, ropes of them being carried to the balcony. Beautiful Japanese lanterns in many unique forms were suspended from the arms of the chandelier and also from the intersections at either end of the hall. The balcony was banded in white, upon which the smilax was arranged with lacy effect, and rows of lanterns swung from the lower rail at either side of the hall.

The stage was another beauty spot, which was noticeably gay, the prevailing colors of the season being predominating almost to the exclusion of white, which formerly has been greatly worn. ## MINSTRELS WILL HEAD THE RIVOLI VAUDEVILLE ACTS

A clever vaudeville program of three numbers will be presented at the Rivoli theatre commencing tomorrow and continuing through Monday and Tuesday with a feature photoplay.

The bill will be headed by a minstrel show with Mrs. George Primrose as interlocutor. Mrs. Primrose is a widow of the late minstrel king and has condensed all the best features of minstrel shows to meet the needs of a vaudeville number. She will act with six men. The number is said to be one of the cleverest on the vaudeville circuit.

Walsh and Austin form a clever comedy team that will entertain the patrons of the theatre. Mr. Budwin Walsh is widely known for his exploits in transcontinental race driving, and his "boss," Ethel Austin, is a cleverly remembered one of the outstanding follies girls. Their songs and repartees are sure to please.

Russia's foremost comedian, Emil Boreo, will appear here on the program. He was a member of the famous "Chanve Souris" and has just recently severed connections with them in order to appear on the vaudeville stage. His fund of artistic antics and dialogue are said to be the most original on the stage. He has a voice of operatic calibre and combined with his humorist qualities is sure to make a hit.

SAN DIEGO, Cal.—Saloons, stores and resorts, comprising about a block of the business section of the "Old Town" of Tia Juana, Mexico, across the line about eighteen miles from here, are in ruins, as the result of a fire Friday night. ## STATE'S UTILITIES TO PAY 18 PER CENT MORE IN 1923 TAXES

MADISON, Wis.—More than three and a half million dollars will be paid into state and municipal treasuries in Wisconsin in taxes by public utility companies, according to figures of the Wisconsin tax commission. This total, the commission says, does not include federal or state income taxes.

In the absence of definite figures on tax ratings, due to varied methods of application, it is estimated the increase in the total tax over last year will run well over 18 per cent.

E. J. Brabant, statistician of the commission, says the final tax for street railroads will be $2,177,110 as compared with $1,949,010 for 1922.

ROMANOFF PRINCE WHO AIDED RASPUTIN DEATH IN U. S. TO SELL GEMS

NEW YORK.—Prince Felix Youssouppoff, nephew by marriage of the late czar of the Romanoff czars of Russia, and self-confessed member of the party of noblemen who slew Gregory Rasputin, monk confessor to the czarina, Friday arrived on the Bereagaria, on his first visit to this country.

He was admitted with his wife, Princess Irene, daughter of the czar's sister, Grand Duchess Xenia, under a diplomatic passport issued during the czarist regime.

Prince Felix said he came here to see the country, visit friends, exhibit and sell a collection of Russian antiques, and to consult with his lawyers about arranging for the return from Joseph E. Widener, Philadelphia millionaire, of two Rembrandt paintings which the prince said he surrendered to the American as collateral for a loan.

About the slaying, one late December night in 1916, of the monk who, by his reputed influence over the czarina, was said to have been the evil genius of Russia during the last days of the old regime, the prince was reticent.

"Too many things have been written about it, many of them false," he declared. "Yes, it was in my palace that Rasputin was killed."

The prince refused to discuss the details of the slaying.

COMINGS RAISES ECONOMY CRY IN SPEECH IN VIOLA

Says State Must Retrench and Discontinue Lavish Appropriations

VIOLA, Wis.—Field economy and retrenchment and abolition of duplication among state departments was advocated by Lieutenant Governor George F. Comings in an address here Friday night. Readjustment of the present tax burdens was also declared by Mr. Comings to be necessary.

"Besides readjustment of the tax burden, the total of taxation should be reduced by cutting down lavish appropriations and by returning to a simpler life in public affairs," the lieutenant governor stated. "The statesman today declares that the farmer needs first of all fair prices for that which he produces, and not greater production and increased facilities for borrowing money. Upon the ability of the farmer to realize fair prices, depends the well or woe of American agriculture."

"One of the most difficult of several fundamental problems is that of marketing. Producers are divided from consumers by a river. A group of monopolists are in possession of the bridge spanning the river. Over this bridge all of the exchanges of the products of labor must pass. These in possession of the bridge and all of the instrumentalities of trade exact a monopoly tribute. Toward the solution of this problem the government must give its attention."

GIRL ADMITS SHE SWORE FALSELY TO CHARGE OF MURDER

Second Man Arrested Confesses, Exonerating Her Sweetheart

CHICAGO, Ill.—An alleged confession by Otto Malm, arrested for robbing a butcher shop, that he killed Edward Lehmann during a robbery several weeks ago of a jail goods factory, has exonerated Walter Beckman, held for the slaying and identified as the slayer by Ethel Beck, his alleged accomplice.

Authorities had regarded the case against Beckman as complete. Malm's alleged confession, according to the police, names his wife, Katherine Malm, as the blonde woman. Search is being made for her by the police.

Confronted with Malm's statement, the Beck girl admitted she had confessed falsely.

MARINES GENERAL SENDS DOUGHBOY "GERMAN SOUVENIR"

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—More than five years ago Everett C. Parry, a doughboy in the St. Michel advance was driving a team of Missouri mules down a French roadway when he espied a big green overcoat heavy with gold insignia, hanging over a wall to dry.

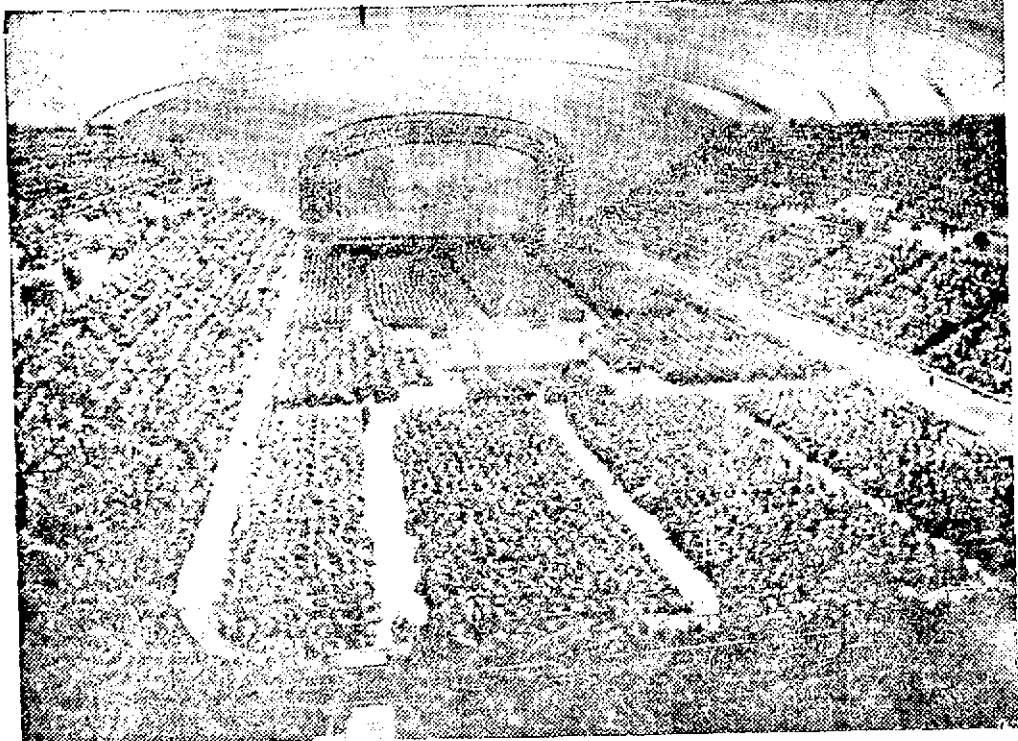

"Captured from a German general," he said, "here is where I got a souvenir." He pulled out his knife and started to rip off the shiny insignia. A few minutes later he was under arrest and facing General Wendell C. Neville, United States Marine corps, who wanted to know why he tried to wreck his overcoat. The boy explained and was reprimanded. A few days ago, General Neville in charge of the marines here, heard that Parry, broken by war, was in a hospital in Rutland, Mass. The general cut off his shiny insignia, put it in a little box, and sent it by registered mail to Parry.

In addition, it has dozens of committee rooms where caucuses might be held.

Nobody has told them yet that their father isn't coming home tonight—or tomorrow night, either. For their daddy, Joe Gurak, was one of the 27 men killed in the explosion in Glen Rogers Mine in Beckley, W. Va. Besides those five is a baby sleeping in the front-room crib.
